Gilbert Pollock, who has charge of the Friley-Gordon side of the case, states that his clients are paying as rapidly as possible for all feathers taken, and that he is trying to have the matter settled out of court. It is understood that the plea will be that a mistake is responsible for the whole affair. Because of a great rush of business the accused men mixed up the bedding and caused all the trouble unconsciously. It is said. Unless the charges are withdrawn Judge O'Connell says that he will not be lenient.
